THE PERVERSION OF HISTORY. Some of the glaring defects in the histories from which the youth of the country must form their ideas of men and measures have recently been brought to light not only in the south, but in Washington and elsewhere.

The Leader recently made reference to the mistakes u the school histories which General H. V. Boynton discovered in the course of a comused in the public schools of Washington. When General Boynton was made a member of the board of education of the District of Columbia his first net was to go through the school histories. He confined his examination to that portion of each of the textbooks covering the Civil war and the war with Spain-matters with which he was himself familiar-and the result was the discovery of a mass of misstatements positively appalling. If other portions of these works are as unreliable as those treated of, then most of the school histories are unworthy of serious consideration

THE DELAWARE CASE.

It was confidently expected that the suit of the Delawares against the Cherokees in the United States court of claims would have been decided before this. The case involves chiefly the question of the rights, or claims of deceased Deliwares of the number of those originally admitted to citizenship in the Cherokee nation. The contention is that under the agreement with the Delawares in 1867, the Cherokees sold them 160 acres of land per head to be set aside for them in the event of allotment. This was no doubt the intention of the agreement, but the Cherokees balked at the proposition to consider these individual shares as perpetual. Under the timenonored laws of the tribe when a member dies, his share in the tribal property goes back into the tribe and is not considered a separate estate. The case involves 157,600 acres of land and R. C. Adams and others, in conjunction with a firm of Washington lawyers, have arranged for the absorption of nearly the entire amount of land. The Cherokees have made a vigorous fight against the case and will consider it toe climax of a long ine of Injustices Inflicted upon them if it is decided in favor of the plain-
